Major duties include supporting the Regional Director's priorities for conserving endangered species, especially for lesser prairie chickens and Mexican wolves. This help is especially needed while other key positions are vacant, and while these issues garner broad interest from partners and the public. This position would serve as a liaison for the Regional Director on key issues internally and externally. It would also serve as a management advisor to the Regional Director so future actions and decisions can be made and implemented more expeditiously and with a broader base of policy analysis and support.

This work would help meet DOI's Priorities including: Restoring trust and being a good neighbor by working closely with states, private landowners and industry to pursue a shared interest in providing business and conservation certainty; Striking a regulatory balance by mutually supporting conservation efforts while providing regulatory certainty; and Creating a conservation stewardship legacy second only to Teddy Roosevelt by saving the last of the southern Great Plains prairie ecosystems and restoring a species in a way that respects other land uses. This position could support the Regional Director's priorities for other endangered species issues as needed.
